Attached is the description of the proposed work. You will notice that it has a different proposal number on the pages. That is because it is a collaborative proposal with a researcher from Texas A&M. Since collaborative proposals are identical and submitted separately by both parties, this proposal is identical to what Taleyarkhan submitted. We could not get the link to Taleyarkhan's project description to work for us, therefore we needed to capture the A&M version. Nonetheless, they are identical in content.

Again, I feel I need to stress to you that nothing that Taleyarkhan has done violates any rule, reg or law. The only question we have here is how will Purdue manage the issue that he is restricted in supervising students as a chair or co-chair and the fact that funding for four students is contained in the budget for the proposal.
